

American Disabilities Corp. delivers medical supplies to senior population

■ Managing Directors and Business Partners Neil Tucker and Paul Kurisko are committed to bringing value to their customers by providing high integrity medical products and supplies that offer consumers options for enhanced living and overall well being.

American Disabilities Corporation (ADC) is a new business located in downtown Trenton at 36 South Broad Street in the Small Business Administration business incubator. ADC was born out of an entrepreneurial vision to offer innovative and useful medical supplies and products to the disabled, senior and caregiver's population.

ADC uses a proprietary business strategy that integrates the caregiver and the consumer into a valuable team, and places the focus on total wellness. ADC incorporated in November of 2005 as a Small Business Enterprise and will be celebrating its one year anniversary with the launch of their new retail on-line store and information Web site at <http://www.ameridiscorp.com>.

Managing Directors and Business Partners Neil Tucker and Paul Kurisko are committed to bringing value to their customers by providing high integrity medical products and supplies that offer consumers options for enhanced living and overall well being.

Their business model is based on being a family, caregiver, and community focused organization that believes optimum wellness is achieved by fully developing the resources of our body, mind and spirit. Tucker and Kurisko are both Mercer County residents and bring over 30 years of combined business experience and insight to this growing marketplace.

They both recognize these market segments are clearly defined and are subject to high growth trends over the next decade and have a clear vision of how ADC can serve this burgeoning population with their unique blend of products and services.

ADC is positioned to provide a line of products that is complete, cost effective and innovative to disabled and senior population. Their flagship products are a line of high grade incontinence care materials, a portable home shower unit designed for a wheelchair, wound and venous insufficiencies products, and Lymphedema treatment and management bandages and garments as well as mobility equipment and caregiver's gifts.

Neil Tucker (seated) and Paul Kurisko, managing directors of American Disabilities Corporation, demonstrate a portable shower, which is one of the many products distributed by the firm.
